

Conscious Consumer: Household Names Profiting From Child Labor

“Corporate giants like Colgate, Nestlé and Unilever assure consumers that their products use ‘sustainable palm oil’, but our findings reveal that the palm oil is anything but.”

According to sources, palm oil plantations are devastating the rainforests across Indonesia and Malaysia destroying the natural habitat of countless different species including elephants and tigers. Palm oil is used in anything from shampoo to chocolate. Read more here.

According to the recent report, The great palm oil scandal, by Amnesty International, some of the world’s most powerful companies in the food and household industry are selling products tainted by a wide range of human rights abuses in palm oil plantations in Indonesia including:

- Children as young as eight working in hazardous conditions.
- Women forced to work long hours under the threat of having their pay cut – earning as little as US$2.50 a day.
- Workers suffering severe injuries from paraquat, an acutely toxic chemical banned in the EU and by the company they work for.

The report investigates conditions in plantations run by the world's biggest palm oil grower, Singapore-based agribusiness Wilmar. The product can be traced to 9 well-known corporations: Colgate-Palmolive, Elevance, Kellogg's, Nestlé, Procter & Gamble, Reckitt Benckiser, Unilever, AFAMSA and ADM.
